Re/Assembling Anti-Racist Struggles An Open Archive

From May 22nd, 2022

People with experiences of racism, anti-Semitism and discrimination have been fighting for equality and social change for decades. However, their stories and perspectives remain mostly invisible and untold. To bring these protests more into the public focus, testimonies of the struggles are exhibited.

Together with many people from East, West and reunified Germany, the FHXB Friedrichshain-Kreuzberg Museum has been working for some time to tell the stories of the struggles against racism and anti-Semitism. Together, new ways of collecting, processing and presenting are being sought.

At the FHXB Friedrichshain-Kreuzberg Museum, an open archive has been created with the first results of this joint research. It is a collection of broken and found objects that will continue to grow during workshops and with the support of the visitors. The open archive is intended to become a debate space that brings together past experiences with today's debates and struggles against anti-Semitism, racism and all forms of discrimination.

A cooperation project of the Georg-August-University Göttingen, the Kiel University of Applied Sciences, the Documentation Center and Museum on Migration in Germany e.V. (DOMiD) and the FHXB Friedrichshain-Kreuzberg Museum.

Funded by the Federal Agency for Civic Education.
